QUEEN'S COLLEGES (IRELAND).

RETURN to an Order of the Honourable The House of Commons, dated 16 February 1857;—for,

A RETURN "of the NAME, DATE of APPOINTMENT, and SALARY of the PRESIDENTS, VICE-PRESIDENTS, FELLOWS, and PROFESSORS of the QUEEN'S COLLEGES in Cork, Belfast, and Galway respectively; if there be any Official Residence, or Allowance instead of a Residence, provided for such Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Fellows, and Professors, the Number of Weeks in each Year, since the opening of these Colleges for the Instruction of Students, during which such Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Fellows, and Professors shall have resided elsewhere than in such Colleges or Official Residences respectively; if any of the said Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Fellows, or Professors hold any other and what Public Office or Employment, and, if there be any Salary, Emolument, or other Advantage, attached to such Office or Employment, the Nature and Value thereof, and the Date of Appointment to such Office or Employment."

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, CORK.

RETURN from the PRESIDENT.

Queen's College, Cork.

1. Name of President?—Robert Kane.

2. Date of appointment?

The date of the Letters Patent founding the College, and appointing Robert Kane to be first President thereof, is 3d January 1846.

3. Salary of President?—£. 800 per annum.

4. If there be any official residence, or allowance instead of a residence, provided for such President?

Apartments (a house unfurnished, and without stables or offices, valued for taxation at 35 l. per annum) are provided for the President. The heating and lighting of the official residence is included with that of the other portions of the College, under the statutes.

5. The number of weeks in each year, since the opening of the College for the instruction of students, during which the President has resided elsewhere than in such College or official residence?

No record is kept of the number of weeks during which the President has resided in the College or official residence, or elsewhere.

The President does not reside continuously at the College, as he accepted the office expressly on the condition that it should not interfere with his continuing to hold the office of Director of the Museum of Irish Industry in Dublin, to which he had been previously appointed. This condition was acceded to and announced, and under this arrangement the President resigned the two professorships which he held in Dublin, and withdrew from his private scientific practice in order to devote himself to the duties of the two Governmental offices, the Directorship of the Museum of Irish Industry and the Presidency of Queen's College, Cork.

Further: the President is not required by the College statutes to reside in the College, and provision is specially made in the statutes for his absence, by the appointment of a Vice-President, who is to discharge all the duties of the internal internal administration of the College during the absence of the President. The frequent absence of the President is in fact rendered obligatory by the charter of the Queen's University, which makes the President ex officio a member of the University Senate, and provides, that in order that the College shall be always represented at the meetings of the Senate, the Vice-President becomes a Senator in case of the President being unable to attend, and should proceed to Dublin to attend the meetings in his stead.

Practically, however, the President has been resident in the College for a portion of every term, in every session, in every year since the College opened, and has discharged every duty assigned to his office by the College statutes, in such manner as that no case has ever occurred in which any embarrassment or inconvenience to the service of the College has arisen, in any way produced by a neglect of duty by the President, or by his absence on any occasion from the College.

The general government of the College is vested by the statutes in the Council, consisting of the President, Vice-President, and four Deans of Faculty, elected annually by the Professors. This body meets at intervals for the transaction of business. Attendance on those meetings is rendered obligatory by the statutes on the other members of Council, but not on the President, whose absence is contemplated by the statutes, by reason of his other duties. The President has, however, when at the College, usually, though not in every case, attended the meetings of Council which occurred, and has, in fact, attended the greater number, viz., 123 out of 234 meetings which have been held from the time of the opening of the College, in October 1849, up to the present date. The meetings so attended by the President were such as were held for the transaction of the more important business of each session; and the meetings not attended by the President were such as had to transact only unimportant business, except in a few instances, when the objects of the meetings had reference to the functions of the President, which the majority of the Council considered would be best decided on in his absence, and arranged accordingly that he should not be present on those occasions.

6. If the President holds any, and what other public office or employment, the nature and value of any salary, emolument or other advantage attached to such office or employment, and date of appointment?

The President is ex officio a member of the Senate of the Queen's University in Ireland, which holds its meetings in Dublin. The President is required, under the charter of the University, to attend all such meetings; and, if unable to attend, the Vice-President becomes a Senator, and should attend in his stead, leaving his class and college duties. The President is, therefore, by the University regulations, required to be in Dublin frequently, and for considerable periods, on the business of the College and of the University.

There is no emolument or advantage connected with the office of member of the Senate of the Queen's University in Ireland.

The date of appointment by the charter of the Queen's University is the 4th of October 1850.

The President of Queen's College, Cork (Robert Kane), holds the office of Director of the Museum of Irish Industry in Dublin, under the department of Science and Art, Board of Trade.

The date of that appointment is 31st March 1845.

The salary of that office is 400 l. per annum.

That office was accepted by Robert Kane in 1845, expressly on the condition that it should not in any way interfere with the other scientific appointments which he then held, or with his private professional business, then very extensive and lucrative. At the close of the year 1845, when Robert Kane was applied to in regard to the office of President of Queen's College, Cork, he agreed to give up his two Professorships, and to retire from private professional business, in order to devote himself to the duties of the two Governmental appointments, but he declined to accept the office of President of Queen's College, Cork, unless he should hold it in conjunction with the office of Director of the Museum of Irish Industry. These conditions were duly considered and finally acceded to, and the office of President of Queen's College, Cork, was, under those circumstances, accepted by Robert Kane; the two Professorships he had held held were given up, and his professional practice abandoned, as already explained.

2.—RETURN as to the OFFICIAL RESIDENCES and ATTENDANCE of the PRESIDENT, VICE-PRESIDENT, and PROFESSORS of the QUEEN'S COLLEGES, Galway.

OFFICIAL residences in this College are provided for the President and Vice-President.

Neither residences, or allowances for residences, are provided for the Professors.

As to the times during which the President and the Vice-President resided elsewhere than in the College or official residences from the opening of the College in October 1849 till May 1853, reference is made to a Return made on this subject to the House of Commons, and ordered to be printed on the 23d May 153. [See Enclosure (A.)] No record has been kept in College books as to the residence of the President and Vice-President since May 1853.

The President has made the following statement as to his residence elsewhere than in the College or official residence since May 1853:

The collegiate session commences on the third Tuesday of October, and ends on the second Saturday of June.

At the close of the session 1852-53, the President was obliged to remove his family from Galway to near Dublin, as the climate of Galway was found entirely unsuited to one of its members, who labours under extreme and continued delicacy.

Session 1853-54.

The President resided with his family for about five weeks in the spring of 1854. He left the College to attend a deputation to the Lord Lieutenant on the 25th April, and was attacked the same night with scarlatina, which spread to other members of his family, and which rendered it impossible for him to return to the College until the end of May.

Session 1854-55.

The President resided with his family for some weeks in January 1855, and again for a part of March and April. On the former occasion he was compelled to remain with his family, owing to the dangerous illness of one of its members; on the latter, owing to the illness and death of his mother.

Session 1855-56.

The President left the College about the middle of March, as one of a deputation from the Queen's Colleges to London on collegiate business. He was taken ill on the way, and confined to bed for four weeks. Immediately, on recovering, he proceeded to London, where he was occupied on the above business for a fortnight. He was then compelled to go to the Continent for about fourteen days, and returned to the College about the 12th May.

The President is repeatedly obliged to go to Dublin to attend the meetings and the committees of the Queen's University, of which he is ex officio a member. He is sometimes obliged to return to his family for some days, owing to the repeated and serious illness of one of its members. But it is impossible for him to state exactly the days and hours during which he may on such occasions have resided out of the College.

During the summer vacations the President repeatedly visits the College, and superintends whatever works may be going on in the several departments.

The Vice-President has made the following statement as to his residence elsewhere than in the College or official residence since May 1853:

I, the Vice-President, resided out of the College and out of Galway for one week, being part of the Easter recess, in 1853, and four weeks in the same year, being part of the summer vacation, and one week, part of the Easter recess, in 1854; from that time to the present, nearly three years, I have continually resided within the College.

I hold no other office or employment.

Enclosure (A.)

EXTRACT from a RETURN made to an Order of the Honourable the House of Commons, dated 18th April 1853, and ordered to be printed by the House of Commons, on the 23d May 1853.

WITH reference to the Return sought for, showing the number of days in each session since the opening of this College, that the respective President, Vice-President, and Members of Council were in attendance at their Colleges, it is observed that no daily record is kept of the attendance or casual absence of these officers; but their general attendance can be stated from their presence at Council, and their performance of other collegiate duties.

The President or Vice-President have not, properly speaking, resided in the College since its opening, as their official residences are still uninhabitable, owing to the very defective manner in which the building of the College has been executed; and the other members of the Council have no residence within the College.

From the defective state of the building, the President has been compelled to provide a residence at a very large expense, near the College, where he has continually resided, except when absent on collegiate or University business, and for some months during the vacations in the years 1850 and 1851.

Session 1849-50.

Each collegiate session commences on the third Tuesday of October, and terminates on the second Saturday of June.

The President was at the College from its opening in October 1849, until the 22d June 1850, with the exception of about five weeks, for part of which time he was engaged in Dublin on collegiate business, and during the remainder was detained by the illness of a near relative.

The Vice-President, the Rev. J. P. O'Toole, having been appointed at the commencement of the second term of the session, in January 1850, attended the College from the period of his appointment to the end of the session, except that he was occasionally absent for a few days.

Session 1850-51.

The President was at the College from before its opening in October 1850 until the 1st of August 1851, more than a month after the College Session, with the exception of about three weeks, when he was engaged in Dublin on collegiate business.

Session 1851-52.

The President has been constantly at the College throughout this session, with the exception of about two months in the spring of 1852, when he was occupied constantly with University business. He has since been repeatedly obliged to attend meetings of the Senate of the Queen's University.

The Vice-President was in attendance at the College from the opening of the session to the 26th March 1852, after which date to the remainder of the session he was absent from the College.

Session 1852-53.

The President has been constantly in attendance from the opening of the session to the present time, except that during the last three weeks he was absent in London on important collegiate business.

The Vice-President, Joseph O'Leary, Esquire, who was appointed in January 1853, came to the College on the 8th February, and has constantly attended to the present date.
